

12th March, 1906.

To the Esteemed Members of the Press,

I write to you not as a man who seeks the spotlight, but as one who has long walked in the shadows—where mystery resides and truth too often lies buried. My name is Edmund Cryer. For more than twenty years I have devoted my life to the investigation of crimes, curiosities, and occurrences that defy ordinary explanation. From the darkest alleys of London to the most remote corners of our land, I have followed the trail of evidence wherever it has led, however unsettling the truth I might uncover.

At my side, in every endeavour, stands my beloved wife, Emma. Her wisdom, strength and steadfast support are the compass by which I navigate each case, and the anchor that allows me to bear the burdens of this perilous calling. Though she prefers to remain beyond the public eye, her influence is woven through every case I undertake.

For several years now, I have also had the privilege of working alongside Detective Constable Arthur Mallory, a young man of integrity, courage and an insatiable curiosity. Together, we have confronted evil in its many forms and sought to bring justice to those who have suffered in silence.

Our work is not born of fame or fortune, but of a shared purpose—to seek the truth, to give voice to the voiceless, and to ensure that history remembers what so many would rather forget.

Within the following pages and works, you will find a glimpse of our journey thus far. I trust they will prove of interest, and perhaps, of assistance in shedding a light upon the unexplained.

Yours obediently,

Edmund Cryer
